whose presence there is an unfathomable purpose of being entertained would be content to let it remain such if the others earthly this minority may have a purpose in the world like the fly and the flea, if for nothing else than to produce the ecstatic feeling of relief which their departure

When the crusade against the high hat was started Omaha theater goers were of the opinion that if it could be banished their cup of happiness would be full. The hat has disappeared and those who are not fortunate enough or who do not desire to sit in the front row can see the stage and those who occupy it, for no Omaha woman would now think of wearing a hat after the rising of the curtain.

There are some people, however, who are unreasonable enough to wish to hear as well as to "see. They appreciate the fact of course that to gratify this desire would infringe on the right of people who sit near them to talk about their hired girl, their neighbors and word politics, but then this world is full of selfish, unreasonable people who care nothing for the rights of others if it interferes with their own pleasures. long since established a precedent of first-The fact that they have paid their money class performances, classical and refined to to see and hear is of little importance com- a degree, and certainly is deserving pared with the inherent, constitutional right of the large and fashionable audiof free speech. In their simple, Japanese ences that visit the Trocadero each evenway, they reason that if all the occupants of ing. Especial care has been taken in each the adjoining seats came for was to tark instance to procure a vaudeville show with they might have enjoyed that privilege the absence of objectionable features and some other place, where they would not be patrons, the success of this method can be under the necessity of taking so many better testified to by the public and from the

There is still another class which insists pathetic or soul stirring and whose conception the actor in his ignorance was blindly trying to follow. The great majority of the audience is of course too obtuse to see the comedy element, but the majority should not for a minute insist on curtailing the when they see or hear something funny.

To cap the climax of woes come those who are in such a hurry to get home that they cannot possibly wait for the performance to close. If they are not familiar with the play and know just when the right time comes to arise, tread on their neighbors' toes and dress skirts, obscure the view of those behind and create a general commotion in the house, they wait for the premonitory symptoms with as much eagerness as an amateur photographer watches his first negative develop. Home is, or should be, a good place to go, but there are those childish enough to wonder why a person who is in such a hurry to get there ever left its sacred portals.

The last week has been an exceptionally prosperous-one to the managers of Omaha playhouses. It is doubtful if ever in the history of the city all the houses have been favored with such exceptional attendance. There have been many times when one house with an especially popular bill has been able to sell out for the entire week. but it has been at the expense of business elsewhere, as a rule. During the last week both matinces and evenings, all three of the leading houses have played to capacity and this without anything exceptional in the way of attractions except at the Creighton, and here principally for the reason that it was the opening of the season and there was among townpeople a general de sire to see the new members of the com-

"Hogan's Alley" at the Boyd has been numerously visited during the past week, and many have laughed at the antics of the yellow kid and his chum and the other denizens of the alley. The two little ones are really clever in their way, and the rest of the company, while in no sense of commanding ability, serve to amuse. The performance has been satisfactory to those who attended it, and if others do not like that kind of a performance they have no cause for com-

Announcements.

Owing to the enormous success of "Hogan's Alley" at Boyd's the past week, Managers Paxton and Burgess have secured this attraction for another week, commencing with a matinee today. This farcical production certainly has all the elements of success, being built around the characters which were made famous by R. F. Outcault, the New York World artist, in his series of Yellow Kid pictures and tales of Hogan's alley. Hogan's alley really exists down on the east side of New York City, and several of the characters that live in it were the originals of Outcault's humorous sketches. The Yellow Kid in real life rejoices in the name of Mickey Dugan. He was a bright little street arab who possesses a wit that is as sharp as a tack and as nimble as the proverbial flea. Messrs, Gilmore and Leonard, when they first thought of producing "Hogan's Alley," sought out and engaged Mickey for his own character of the Yellow Kid. He is a natural born comedian and took to the stage as though he was born on it. He, together with his side partner, Tiddlewinks, will be seen here with "Hogan's Alley." "Hogan's Alley" is an enemy to care and drives away all troubles and those who see it laugh for months afterwards at each recollection of its humorous incidents.

Creighton theater has played to standing room at every performance during the past week. Commencing with today's matines the company will be seen in an elaborate revival of "The Lost Paradise." This play like "Men and Women," is the joint work of Mr. David Belasco and Mr. Henry C. DeMille, two of America's greatest authors The story is so well known that it scarcely needs repetition. The entire company will be used in this play, and a complete production is promised. The story of "Lost Paradise" is told by Mr. Henry C. DeMille

It seems to you, as you look ity go to be entertained, but there are others; and listen to them moving through the scenes, and repeating the struggle that is mystery and probably those who go for the daily going on everywhere upon this earth. where affections hold sway, where soul looks to soul for sympathy and support, and where social conditions array classes against each other in an interminable bitter war, it seems that you are not a mere would only stay away. Like all things and where social conditions array classes idle looker-on at puppets of a play, but that you have a place in the story yourself; that you are a part of the thought and action, and that the homes of the characters and the big fron mill in which the battle for bread culminates and the triumph of several forms of human love is made to crown the end of all their efforts, are as familiar to you as your friend and the person with whom you come in contact in your everyday life."

At the Wednesday matinee , September 21, a cabinet photograph of Mr. Wilson Enos will be given to every woman purchasing seats for the first floor.

The popular Trocadero will present at to day's matinee one of its characteristic good vaudeville performances. Every act upon the program is a good one and new to the city. The management of this theater has greater freedom and comfort at as well the admission of undesirable extraordinary large patronage this popular resort is receiving. The new bill for the on seeing some mirth-provoking quality in week is individually strong and embraces portions of a play which the dramatist in many stellar lights of the vaudeville branch his crude way imagined he was making of the profession, notably little Gertle Cochran, whose engagement is her first visit to Omaha, although she has made two very successful tours of the world. Little Gertiis what is known to the scientific world as the infant mental prodigy, being but 8 years of age. She will answer thousands laughing privilege of really bright people of intricate and difficult questions correctly She will answer every question she may be asked and upon any subject. Eight other acts complete the bill, among which wil

Swo and Devoe appear in a new and novel specialty of pleasant surprises; Annie Leslie Williams, German character soubrette and change artist, with her famous wooden shoe dancing. A scene in the second act of "Superba," which, by the way, has many startling novelties for this year, is a woman's boudoir, in which Pierrot inadvertently finds himself and where he suffers unknown terror by having to witness part of the woman's preparations within earshot. Pierrot finally escapes to the bath room, where he is presently en gulfed by water that runs from innumerable faucets turned on unconsciously by him or his entrance, and which finally engulfs him The scene changes and he finds himself on a stormy, turbulent sea. Still floating in the bath tub, he tries to reach a lighthouse that appears in the distance and which recede as fast as he approaches. Hanlon's new "Su perba" will appear at Boyd's theater for one week, opening with Sunday matinee, Sep-

Manager Lieven has secured for this veek's attraction at Schlitz Roof garder the Damm Family Female orchestra, which needs no introduction to lovers of musiin this city.

The Omaha Museum and Theater, unde the management of Bert Davis, better known as the "Original Rube," is fast forging to the front as a popular family re sort, presenting a change of program each week that is particularly interesting to women and children. The headliner this week will be Prof. Lewis, "The Man of Mystery," who accompanied by his two daughters give a most refined and unique entertainment.

The crowning event of the week at Guill's Concert garden will be the free-for-all cake walk on Thursday night. Among the talent who will compete for the three grand prizes will be the late prize winners from the Midway.
